As a scholar, my research focuses on the intersection of race, space, and higher education, with an emphasis on the experiences of Black students at predominantly white institutions (PWIs). My dissertation, which explored these themes, was awarded the Dr. Joi Spencer Social Justice Champion Dissertation of the Year Award. I'm a professor of sociology and education, specializing in research methods and theory, with courses on career readiness and capstone seminars. I'm committed to equity, access, and creating pathways for success.
